The Archaeological Riches of Peru's South Coast

Presentation by:

Kevin Vaughn

Dean, UCR Extension
Associate Professor of Anthropology

You would think that someone who has spent time excavating in ancient mines and villages in the remote outposts of Peru would have fascinating stories to tell. You would be right. UCR Extension Dean Kevin Vaughn, is an authority on Andean archaeology, ceramic analysis, preindustrial mining, and household archaeology.

Join the Affiliates on October 7th, where we will be introduced to the pre-Columbian South Coast of Peru. Vaughn will describe his fieldwork excavating in mines and residential villages. He will also discuss the world famous Nasca Geoglyphs (see photo below), or "Nasca Lines." These images, over 2,000 years old, are perfectly straight parallel and intersecting lines depicting plants, animals, and fantastic creatures on a giant scale that are best viewed from high in the sky.

Dr. Kevin Vaughn was appointed Dean of UCR Extension in January of 2018. Prior to coming to UCR, he served as Associate Dean of Academic Affairs for UCLA Extension and as an associate professor at Purdue. He holds M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in anthropology from UC Santa Barbara and a B.A. from the University of Washington. His principal research interests are in Andean archaeology; political economies of pre-state societies; pilgrimage; pre-industrial mining; village archaeology; and ceramic analysis. Vaughn is the author of The Ancient Andean Village: Marcaya in Prehispanic Nasca.
