“The State of the Campus”

Presentation By:
Kim A. Wilcox
Chancellor, UC Riverside

Much like many sectors of our everyday life, UCR was going gangbusters through early March of this year. However, as the COVID-19 pandemic intensified, education institutions in Riverside County were ordered closed. Within a matter of days, UCR took its instruction online and made the transition to both distance learning and distance working (for most employees).

Several months later, UCR is now looking at how it may bring students and employees back to campus. Because students come to UCR from all over the region, state, nation, and world, the campus will likely return to normalcy at a far slower pace than most other businesses.

Join the CUC on May 27th as Chancellor Kim Wilcox provides an overview of how UCR was able to transition to distance learning, the impacts – both fiscal and social felt by students, employees, and the institution, and what decisions have been made and steps being considered to ensure a safe and stable return to the “old normal.”
